The Farm Crisis

To the MAGAZINE:
Having grown up in a community dependent on farm income, I read with more than passing interest the outstanding issue of Nov. 30, "Harvest of Pain." I could fully identify with the community of Lebanon, as well as the struggling farmer in this area of economic uncertainty and personal pain. Congratulations on delineating the personal and economic complexities facing our farming communities.

I noted with pride your inclusion of Dr. Mark Abram in the issue. He completed his undergraduate education at Northern Kentucky University. We, as his alma mater, are very proud of Dr. Abram and his achievements.

"A Different Christmas"

To the MAGAZINE:
I just read "A Different Kind of Christmas Story" [Dec. 21]. It is indeed a beautiful and touching story. The author wrote in such a simple, honest way.

I can't do much for the family financially because we aren't sure where our next meal will come from. I did see one gift they have that so many wealthy people don't — LOVE!

My love and prayers are with them.

"Uncommon Courage"

To the MAGAZINE:
I am stunned! C. Ray Hall has a heart after all. I am very surprised.

I just finished "Uncommon Courage" [Dec. 28], in which he describes his mother's long battle against cancer. It was very heartwarming and tearful at times.

I know, I know. I had said that I wouldn't read his column any more. But after the uproar of "My Old Kentucky Hoax" [Aug. 31], I started again just to see what I was missing.

"Uncommon Courage" was written from the heart.
